

Fred Yentz accepts ILS Technology's CEO role

Jul 09, 2008 at 10:19 AM

Fred Yentz (pictured) has decided to vacate his role as Senior Vice President and COO for ILS Technology to take up the role of CEO. Succeeding former CEO Joe Cestari, who has stepped down from the post but remains with the company in an advisory capacity, Mr. Yentz brings more than 20 years of experience in the technology industry to the leadership position.

Mr. Yentz currently sits on the Board of Directors of the Telecommunications Industry Association (TIA), Electronics Industry Alliance (EIA), National Science and Technology Education Program (NSTEP), and serves as Chairman of the Industry Advisory Board for Florida Atlantic University's College of Engineering. His past career has seen him work in management roles with companies including IBM and RadiSys Corp.

ILS Technology is a software and services provider the technology industry.

By Síle Mc Mahon